The NCCPG is a charitable organisation which seeks to conserve, catalogue and promote the shared plant heritage of Great Britain and Ireland. There are now over 650 National plant Collections, held in private gardens, allotments, nurseries local parks, botanical gardens and historic estates. Working together with local collection holders and specialist nurseries, the NCCPG encourages the propagation and distribution of interesting and unusual plants at risk of disappearing forever.

If you would like to help or want further information please visit www.nccpg.com. You can support our garden heritage by becoming a member.

Membership of Plant Heritage

Members receive the National Directory, with details of local and national collections, two issues of the journal 'Plant Heritage' and invitations to talks, demonstrations, gardens and collections within the local area. Members also have the opportunity to take part in the annual National Plant Exchange.

To join the NCCPG or for further details, please contact the Membership Secretary
